

Gentlemen:

My husband and I are outraged that Sinclair Broadcasting is planning to show a documentary called "Stolen Honor" and is forcing it's affiliates to show this movie right before the election. This is directly against FCC guidelines, as this movie is an advertising vehicle for the Bush campaign and nothing else. While we believe in free speech totally and believe that Sinclair has every right to show this movie, we also know that the Kerry campaign must be able to have equal time. Might we suggest showing the movie that is out now in selected theatres "up River, the Long war of John Kerry", so that the Kerry campaign is given their entitlement of equal time. If the FCC does not do this, then they will be looked upon by millions, as not doing their jobs. Joyce and Ben Trebich
